The Campbell Law Peer Mentor Program is composed of second and third-year students who have proven themselves to be leaders within the school. They have chosen to help mentor students as they navigate the challenge that is law school.

The Peer Mentor Program's goal is to provide a compassionate, caring, and communal environment for first-year students. The first year of law school can be a challenging time. The Peer Mentor Program strives to make the transition as smooth as possible while encouraging school and community involvement. These students are who you will be able to go to when you need advice, help, or just moral support during law school, use this time to get to know them.

The Peer Mentor Program does not stop at the doors of the building. Throughout the semester, the mentors will plan off-campus events to talk about the positive and challenging aspects of the first year and offer any advice they can give.

"Peer Mentors at Campbell Law help you navigate your first year with the confidence and wisdom that you need to succeed. From being a shoulder to lean on during difficult times – and yes, there will be trying times during your first year – or encouraging you during exams, they are rock stars. Having a mentor is truly a gift."

-Nisel Desai, Law Class of 2018

"The first year of law school is full of so many different challenges. I enjoyed the Peer Mentor program because I knew had this group of mentors I could turn to for questions on how to navigate 1L year. Plus, the food was a pretty nice perk too!"

-Holly Stephens, Law Class of 2017

"Your first year of law school is such a unique and terrifying adventure. It really helped me to have upperclassmen there to reassure me, 'hey, I've done this before, and I survived—you will too.' The friends I made through my peer mentor group are now some of my best friends, and they helped make 1L year fun (and who knew that was possible?)."

-Katie Tysinger, Law Class of 2016
